Nubian Breed History

The Nubian type goat is most likely the oldest species of goat known to mankind. Some breeders feel the name Nubian is not an accurate name for the breed, due to the crosses made in its development. The name "Nubian" originates from Nubia, a desert region in Northern Sudan. It is said that the animals from this area did not play an important part in the development of the Anglo-Nubian. Although the French started working on the Nubian type animals before the English, credit must be given to the British for the development of the present day Nubian. Known as the Anglo-Nubian, the Nubian is mainly a combination of two pure breeds, the Anglo or English, and the Nubian, whose origin is more obscure, tracing to a variety of sources. The Anglo part of the ancestry includes the English breed and various crossbred animals. Under the development of the Anglo-Nubian, regulations were in place to bring in new blood, provided foreign blood other than Nubian was not evident for a given number of generations. A small percentage of Swiss blood has in some cases been gradually introduced in this way.

Nubian type does were imported into America as early as 1896, but most of these early imports were lost to the breed until the import of three animals, buck, Holly Lodge Shingle, and twin does, Wigmore Brownie and Wigmore Pansy, by Mr. J.R. Gregg of California. Mr. Gregg imported another buck, Scriventon Bellerphone, and a doe Luxor Butane, in 1913. These animals formed the nucleus from which Nubians in America descended. Mr. Gregg developed two important lines: the Bonzai line Holly Lodge Shingle, who was a grandson of Bricket Cross, and a great grandson to Sedgemere Sangers, and the Inkyo line from Scriventon Bellerphone.

Between 1909 and 1918, Anglo was dropped from the name and forty were registered as Purebred Nubians in the United States. In 1917 Major D.C. Mowat brought in five Anglo-Nubians into British Columbia, Canada. The bucks he had were Harborough Volunteer and Edenbrook Cyrus, a pure white hornless sire of many Nubians including Spring Beauty AR #7, the first Nubian to qualify for an AR.

Nubians are the most popular breed in the United States and continue to outnumber all of the currently recognized breeds.

The Nubian Breed Standard

The Nubian is a relatively large, proud, and graceful dairy goat of mixed Asian, African, and European origin, known for high quality, high butterfat milk production.

The head is the distinctive breed characteristic, with the facial profile between the eyes and the muzzle being strongly convex (Roman nose). The ears are long (extending at least one inch (2.54 cm) beyond the muzzle when held flat along the face), wide and pendulous. They lie close to the head at the temple and flare slightly out and well forward at the rounded tip, forming a "bell shape. The ears are not thick, with cartilage well defined. The hair is short, fine and glossy. Any color or colors, solid or patterned, is acceptable.
